

Misuse and Abuse Cases: Getting Past the Positive

Paco Hope, Gary McGraw, & Annie I. Antón. IEEE Security & Privacy, May/June 2004.

From the First Paragraph

Software development is all about making software do something: when software vendors sell their products, they talk about what the products do to make customers' lives easier, such as encapsulating business processes or something similarly positive. Following this trend, most systems for designing software also tend to describe positive features.

Part "Attachment Data"

Mime-type: application/pdf, size: 76961 bytes